DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 5 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Temple et al (US Pat. 5103290).

Regarding claims 5 and 6, Temple et al disclose a chip device/package comprising:

- an integrated lead frame (96/98/94 in Fig. 12; Col. 8, line 39- Col. 9, line 45) having source (96 in Fig. 12) and gate (98 in Fig. 12) terminals/connections
- a bumped die (Fig. 2; Col. 4, line 5- Col. 7, line 5) including solder bumps (30/44 in Fig. 3-9; Col. 5, line 38- Col. 7, line 3; Col. 8, line 1-38) on top side, the die being attached/soldered to the base of the integrated lead frame such that the solder bumps contact respective source and gate terminals/connections
- a copper plate/frame (84 in Fig. 11 and 12; Col. 8, line 39- Col. 9, line 45) having a top surface soldered to the backside metallization of the die (Col. 8, line 57) and a bottom attached/bonded to the lead rail (82 in Fig. 11/12; Col. 8, line 44) using conventional processes such as soldering, brazing, etc. such that the copper plate contacts the drain region (metallization 14 at the backside of the die in Fig. 10-13)

Art Unit: 2811

(Fig. 1-13; Col. 4-14).

Temple et al disclose using a copper plate/frame connecting the backside of the die with the lead rail but fails to specify/designate the copper plate/frame as a copper clip. The conventional components used in the chip interconnection/packaging art including conductive plate/strap, clip, frame/ring, etc. can be designated/specified according to the shape and function (reduced electrical resistance, stress relief, etc.) of the interconnecting components. Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill the art at the time invention was made to incorporate a copper clip attached/connected to the backside of the die to achieve the desired electrical resistance and bonding yield in Temple et al's device.
